The image displays a variety of silk fabrics, likely for traditional garments. On the left is a long, narrow strip of dark blue silk featuring a repeating pattern of large, stylized pink and red peonies with green foliage. This strip is bordered at both ends by a wide, intricate gold-colored woven band. To the right of this strip are several smaller, folded pieces of silk, each with a different color palette and floral motif. These include shades of purple, green, brown, and teal, all featuring similar peony designs. Each of these smaller pieces also has a gold-colored woven border. The fabrics are laid out on a plain, light-colored surface.

The image displays four silk sarees, each with a unique color palette and floral motif. The sarees are folded and arranged in a vertical stack. The topmost saree features a deep red border and a maroon body with pink and blue flowers. The second saree has a green border and a green body with pink and blue flowers. The third saree has a red border and a dark blue body with pink and blue flowers. The bottom-most saree has a red border and a dark blue body with pink and blue flowers. The text 'Iconic silk' is centered over the middle of the stack.
